Playwright and His Friend Harry P Taber Make Fun for the Roosevelt Children-A Sample of the Nonsense Verse Recited - Indiana All Right.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., Sept. 17 .- A rumor of some proportions broke loose here this morning that the Sultan of Sulu was coming to town to confer with President Roose-The Sultan of Sulu wearing rings in his ears and nose and otherwise attired in his native costume, is what the Oyster Bay people who have never seen George Ade's production staged expected. The Sultan was coming, it was reported, on the 12:20 o'clock train. As nearly as could be ascertained after Mr. Ade's arrival Mr. Ade came on that 12:20 train.

The rumor about the Sultan started from the executive office. It started about the time a man employed on a local paper left the office. It broke loose on the street a few seconds later. It takes a few seconds for the ordinary man to tumble down the executive office stairs to the street. The local newspaper man had overheard Secretary Loeb say that the Sultan was coming. He knew that was what he heard. There was no mistake about it. Wasn't he standing right there at the office door when words were uttered, and didn't people in the room with the secretary say that it would be something new for the President and that he would enjoy it immensely; and anyway, hadn't he asked Secretary Loeb if what he said was true, and hadn't the secretary replied that it was?

Some people who heard the report in the street doubted it. They didn't know where the Sultan lived, but they were sure it would take him a long time to get here and that the Oyster Bay papers would at least have had something to say about his being expected.

A man was sent into the offices for a confirmation of the report. He returned and said that he asked one of the clerks if it was true that the Sultan of Sulu was coming and the clerk had said:

Certainly. I believe that is one of his At the railroad station when the 12:20 train pulled in were about one hundred people, nearly everybody, in fact, who didn't know that the local scribe had only caught the latter part of Mr. Loeb's remark and that what the secretary really had said was that George Ade, author of the "Sultan of Sulu," was expected. The President's rig was at the station to meet the train. The crowd pushed forward as the train came to a standstill. The passengers few of the things they heard: "The Sultan! The Sultan! Do you see him? The Sultan of Sulu. Does he wear feathers in his hair? Has he really rings in his nose? Is he half as bad as he is pictured? Does the Sultan wear trousers, do you came out on the platforms, and these are a

Does the Sultan wear trousers, do you suppose?"

Among the passengers was a young man, pale and slender and of modest appearance. He seemed to have a little more definite idea of what the crowd was talking than the other passengers, but he didn't appear to relish it. He had never been in Oyster Bay before. He looked at his legs, buttoned his coat, felt of his chest, grabbed hold of his hat and hurried toward the line of carriages, inquiring as he glanced back furtively over his shoulder which was the President's rig. Behind him hurried another man, who got into the President's carriage also.

The two took luncheon at Sagamore Hill, and from what has been learned about their visit it is safe to say that the Roosevelt children, at least, had a whole lot of fun. George Ade told stories and Mr. Taber recited verses, and all the children and the guests as well, as Mr. Ade put it, had "the best time ever." One of the limericks which the visitors left at the Hill was this:

"A tutor who tuted the flute. Tried to tutor two tooters to toot; They said to the tutor.

Is it harder to toot or to tutor two tooters to toot? Mr. Ade after he had returned to the station and was satisfied that his surmise upon his arrival regarding his popularity in Oyster Bay was baseless, spoke as fol-lows concerning his visit to the President.

"I told the President as soon as I got at his house that I didn't have any business there, and the President welcomed me and said: 'Mr. Ade, I am always glad to see and said: 'Mr. Ade, I am always glad to see a man with no business here.'

"But, speaking seriously," continued the visitor, "I was called to Sagamore Hill on a political mission. You probably know that I've just bought a farm out in Indiana. The President wanted to get some reliable information about the conditions out there. He wanted it fresh, he had been getting a lot of stale reports, conflicting reports, about the situation.

"He sent for me. I came, and I told him that it would be 40,000 majority, at least 40,000, for the Republican ticket. The President seemed to be very much relieved."

Mr. Ade had heard a political story out

President seemed to be very much relieved."
Mr. Ade had heard a political story out in Indiana. He told it at Sagamore Hill.
A Parker man and a Roosevelt man, he said were discussing the candidates.
"Well," said the Roosevelt man, "I never seen this here fellow, Parker, and I never heerd him speak, but, judgin' from the accounts thet I've read of his doin's, he's jest about the sort of a chap thet folks would take to a Sunday school picnic to hang up the swing for the children."
Mr. Ade added that he had also heard

Mr. Ade added that he had also heard one or two good political stories about the President out in Indiana, but allowed that they could be saved until after election.

Another visitor at Sagamore Hill to-day was Delevan Smith, editor of the Indianapolis News. He told the President that while the situation on the surface looks promising for the Republicans, yet it is true that the Democrats have a chance this year for the first time in ten years to test their real strength. The Democrats of Indiana hitherto, he said, have been split into factions, but there is more harmony now. William Jennings Bryan, he said, would make thirty speeches in the State in an effort to bring into the Democratic fold the voters who lean toward Watson and Populism.

Watson and Populism.

He said that one of the biggest factors in the result of the Indiana election will be the vote of the young men. There are, he declared, 17,000 new voters, and the outlook is now that the most of them will cast their ballots for Roosevelt and Fair-banks

PRIESTS TO GO TO ROME. Bishop McDonnell to Head a Large Party Which Sails Nov. 15.

Bishop McDonnell of Brooklyn and a large party of priests and laymen of his diocese are going to Rome for the celebration on Dec. 8 in St. Peter's of the golden jubilee of the proclamation of the dogma of the Immaculate Conception of the Blessed Virgin. Afterward the party will visit the Holy Land.

Bishop McDonnell and his party will sail on Nov. 15 on the Cunard steamer Pannonia. The pilgrimage will be the most important in point of numbers that ever left New York for Rome. Among the ecclesiastics who will attend the celebration are Bishop Colton of Buffalo, Father O'Hare of St. Anthony's Church, the Very Rev. Eugene Porcile, Assistant Superior General, and the Rev. John I. Barrett, secretary of the Brooklyn diocese.

secretary of the Brooklyn diocese.

Bishop McDonnell bears the title "Assistant at the Pontifical Throne." It was conferred upon him May 19, 1903, by the late Pope Leo XIII. The honor gives him precedence over senior bishops, and even archbishops, and will enable him to be one of the few closely in touch with Pope Pius X.

The special service to be held in St. Peter's will be celebrated with all the pomp and splendor of the church. Thousands of Catholic pilgrims will go to Rome from every part of the world. Pontifical high mass will be celebrated by the Pope.

The Bishop of Brooklyn and his party of pilgrims will voyage to Rome leisurely. Arrangements have been made with the Cunard Line by which the Pannonia will go first to the Azores, then to Gibraltar, and from there to Naples, reaching Naples about the last of November. Rome will be reached about Dec. 2, according to the itinerary arranged by Mgr. Barrett.

On Dec. 12 the Brooklyn pilgrims will leave Rome and sail for the Holy Land. Bishop McDonnell purposes to spend Christmas in Bethlehem.

CONEY IN DARKNESS AGAIN.

Dreamland the Only Bright Spot in the Place-Crowd Scared. Something went wrong with a feed wire in the transformer station of the Edison Electric Light Company at Coney Island about half past 8 o'clock last night, and every electric light in the city of odds and ends winked out save those in Dreamland. Dreamland blazed like a diamond in a heap of coal. It had it own light circuit. Luna Park was black. There wasn't a twinkle hold of his hat and hurried toward the line of carriages, inquiring as he glaned back furtively over his shoulder which was the President's rig. Behind him hurried another man, who got into the President's carriage also.

"I am favorably known here," said Mr. Ade (to his companion in the carriage, Marry P. Taber, writer of jingles. The fact of the matter was Mr. Ade was not known, and it was almost an hour after he left the station for Sagamore Hill before the crowd learned that the real Sultan wasn't coming and that the creator of the fictitious one was already here.

Mr. Ade came on a social visit, as also did Mr. Taber. Some of the President's family heard Mr. Taber recite some "Nonsense" verses in Washington last winter and he was invited to the White House. He visited the President at Sagamore Hill last week and the President asked him to come again to-day and bring Mr. Ade.

The two took luncheon at Sagamore Hill, and from what has been learned about their visit is a sele to say that the Roosavelt.

SIMPLE LIFE PREACHER HERE. Has Learned English in a Year-Will

Special at $1.45.

Interview Strenuous Life President. The Rev. Charles Wagner, the Alsatian author and preacher, whose book "The Simple Life" has been translated into many languages and is very popular in country, arrived yesterday aboard the French liner La Lorraine from Havre. He will lecture in English. John Wanamaker, who greeted Mr. Wagner at the pier,

"I met him a little more than a year ago after I had read 'The Simple Life.' He knew then only two English words, "yes" and "no." I told him that he must come to America and talk to the people, but that in order to do so he would have to know how to talk in English. He answered that he would meet me here in about a year, and that he would know English. You see he has kept his promise

Mr. Wagner said that he found that in learning English the mere knowledge of the pronunciation and meaning of words was not enough, and so he employed an actor to teach him how to express himself forcibly. Mr. Wagner said that he would forcibly. Mr. Wagner said that he would visit the President, who has written in eulogistic terms of the preacher's books, and see "what kind of a man he is." Mr. Wagner was dressed in a rough suit of coarse material and wore heavy tramping boots. He is broadshouldered, square-jawed and has large eyes widely set apart in a massive head.
